Manulife's Chief Information Officer recognised as Hong Kong CIO Awards 2015 Winner

Hong Kong — Manulife's Chief Information Officer ("CIO") Lilian Wong has won the CIO Award in the Large Enterprise category at the Hong Kong CIO Awards, co-organised by Computerworld Hong Kong and CIO Connect. The annual accolades seek to recognise IT executives who demonstrate outstanding vision and execution in their role as a CIO and technology leader.

"I would like to congratulate Lilian on winning this award, which stands as testimony to her sustained commitment in driving technology transformation at Manulife," said Michael Huddart, Manulife's Executive Vice President and General Manager for Greater China.

He added: "As Manulife strives to become an even more customer-centric organization, we need to have a better understanding of customers so that we can provide them with personalized financial solutions. Digital infrastructure and technology are key enablers on this front and I am proud to see the work of Lilian and her team in these areas recognized with such a distinctive honour."

The winners of the Hong Kong CIO Awards 2015 were selected by a panel of industry professional judges based on their key achievements and accomplishments in demonstrating technology-led innovation, creating significant business value, driving business/technology transformation, as well as developing and managing IT talent.

Accepting the award, Wong said: "I was very honoured to receive the HK CIO Award and would like to thank the panel judges for recognising our work and accomplishments at Manulife. I also wish to express my sincere appreciation to our senior management for their strategic vision of investing in information technology and my team for their commitment to this vision."

This year, the organisers have selected a winner for each of three categories — large enterprise, medium enterprise and the public sector. The Large Enterprise category refers to enterprises that have an IT budget of approximately HK$100 million or above.
